5 MR. APPLEBAUM: Thank you, your Honor.

6 MR. ELLMAN: Thank you, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: It is so ordered if you want

9 MR. APPLEBAUM: Thank you, your Honor.

10 MR. ELLMAN: Whatever the court prefers,
11 your Honor.

12 MR. APPLEBAUM: The court's record is fine.

13 THE COURT: The decision is so ordered.

14 MR. ELLMAN: Thank you, your Honor.

15 Mr. Feinstein will present the last motion.

16 MR. FEINSTEIN: Good morning, your Honor.

17 Robert Feinstein of Pachulski Stang Zeihl Young Jones and 18 Weintraub. We are conflicts counsel for the debtors. With 19 me is my colleague, Beth Levine.

20 MS. LEVINE: Good morning, your Honor.

21 MR. FEINSTEIN: Your Honor, we're here
22 today pursuant to your Honor's October 13th, 2006 which 23 bifurcated the reclamation issue and established the 24 briefing schedule on the so-called valueless defense to 25 reclamation claims arising under Dairy Mart. And your

1 Honor has now received extensive briefs analyzing Dairy
2 Mart and the impact of the BAPCPA amendments as they relate 3 to reclamation, being the amendment to 546(c) which now
4 creates a 45 day reclamation right under the Bankruptcy 5 Code, as well as 503(b)(9) which established administrative 6 priority claims for suppliers.

7 Your Honor, I'll offer up that I have the 8 long version and the short version. Your Honor has 9 received papers that rival the Manhattan telephone 10 directory. I can march through our analyses of the 11 statute, the applicable cases, to demonstrate that because 12 the reclaimed goods were essentially used to finance the 13 DIP loan that was used to repay the prior lien, that all 14 the reclamation claims in this case are appropriate valued 15 as zero, as was noted in the debtors' notice of reclamation 16 claims filed with the court.

17 And we've received 24 responses, your 18 Honor. We they raise a core number of arguments that we've 19 addressed in our papers and I'm happy to address for the 20 court today.

21 One thing I wanted to note at the outset, 22 your Honor, some of the papers argue that Dana tried to 23 pull a fast one, or that there was a case for equitable 24 estoppel because somehow reclamation claimants were taken 25 by surprise that Dana raise the valueless defense. And in

1 that respect I want to point the court and those parties to 2 the motion that was filed on the first day of this case on 3 March 3rd establishing reclamation procedures where Dana 4 said loud in clear in paragraph 12 that 546(c) of the 5 Amended Bankruptcy Code provides the reclamation rights are 6 "subject to the prior rights of a holder of a security 7 interest of such goods or the proceeds thereof." And Dana 8 cited to a number of the cases raising and discussing the 9 valueless defense.

10 So parties were put on notice, they are 11 generally on notice that Dairy Mart is a precedent in this 12 jurisdiction, there are notice of the amended statute, and 13 they were put specifically notice by Dana that this issue 14 would be raised, and it was in fact raised as we've 15 indicated in the pleadings leading up to the October 13th 16 order.

17 As a matter of process we thought it
18 appropriate to raise and litigate this defense first before 19 getting into individualized issues relative to the wide 20 variety of reclamation claims. And there are quite a 21 number of those claims your, Honor, Dana being a large 22 automotive supplier regularly does business with thousands 23 of suppliers.

24 After the bankruptcy case was filed over 25 450 reclamation demands or letters were sent to Dana

1 invoking either 546(c) of the Bankruptcy Code, or Section
2 2702 of the UCC, and the total face amount of those claims 3 was nearly 300 million dollars.

4 Each of the claims, the reclamation
5 demands, asserted a right to reclaim either equipment or 6 inventory which were the subject of a blanket lien granted
7 to the debtors prepetition lenders.

8 And as the court is aware and its papers 9 discuss in ample detail, after the case was filed Dana had 10 obtained a DIP loan, pledged the same collateral to the DIP 11 lender, the proceeds of that loan used to satisfy the 12 prepetition lien. Based on Dairy Mart, it is really on all 13 fours, those reclamation claims were rendered valueless 14 under those circumstances.

15 And the reclamation claimants have now
16 tried using cases outside this jurisdiction like Phar-Mor 17 and the provisions of BAPCPA to argue that Dairy Mart is 18 not good law or shouldn't be followed by this court and 19 that their reclamation claim survives, notwithstanding 20 that their reclaimed goods were used as collateral to 21 obtain a loan that was used to satisfy a prior lien, which 22 clearly trumped their reclamation under well established 23 law.

24 The arguments range from Dairy Mart is 25 wrong to the amendment of BAPCPA erased years of juris

1 prudence relevant to reclamation to the equitable estoppel 2 motion that I raised before. Parties have invoked the 3 notion that they are entitled to marshalling, even though 4 it's fairly well settled that if you are an unsecured
5 creditor, not a lienor, you have no right to invoke
6 marshalling. And we've attempted through our reply brief 7 that was filed about two weeks ago to address these 8 arguments one by one.

9 So your Honor has before you the opening 10 brief that we filed, 24 responses that were filed by 11 reclamation claimants, our reply brief, and then in the 12 last couple of days, and including yesterday a couple of 13 our replies were filed, although they were not contemplated 14 by your Honor's briefing order. We can certainly -- we've 15 read those and we've addressed those, I don't think they 16 raise anything new or different.

17 So, if I could, your Honor, I'll take the 18 arguments in sort of their larger categories. The plain 19 language of 546(c) now, as amended, contemplates that 20 reclamation claims are subject to the prior rights of the 21 holders of the security interest, and in that respect 22 546(c) did not indicate a sea change in the law, arguably 23 it codified Dairy Mart and the other cases around the 24 country that have held that reclamation claims are 25 valueless where those goods are subject to a blanket lien,

1 which is what we have here.

2 And efforts to argue that somehow 546(c)
3 changed law are really unpersuasive. And there don't 4 appear to be any arguments in any of the opposition that 5 can undue the clear words of the statute, which is that the 6 reclamation claimants are subordinate to the holder of a 7 security interest, which is what we have here.

8 A lot of the claimants argue incorrectly,
9 or mischaracterize Dana's argument, that the existence of a 10 prior lien extinguished the reclamation right. We are not 11 arguing that. What we argued is that it subordinates the 12 reclamation right and it makes it valueless the those 13 goods, the reclaimed goods, are used to satisfy the prior 14 lien. And the cases in are legion around the country where 15 reclaimed goods are in effect liquidated and sort of 16 disposed of to satisfy the prior lien by a variety of 17 means. It could be done by way of a bulk sale of the goods 18 that would be used to satisfy the prior lien, or as we had 19 in this case and Dairy Mart, a pledge of those goods to the 20 DIP lender where the proceed of the DIP loan are used to 21 satisfy the prior lien which had trumped the reclamation 22 claims to begin with.

23 Since the enactment of BAPCPA, there is 24 only one case that we found that addressed this issue head
25 on, and that was the decision of Judge Sontchi in Delaware

1 in the Advanced Marketing case. And while he was hearing
2 the matter on a TRO, he did make some salient observations, 3 which is that if the goods that are the subject of the 4 reclamation demand are the subject of a prepetition lien or 5 a DIP lien, that trumps the reclamation demand, it renders 6 them valueless. And he indicated in his decision that his 7 decision would have been the same under the pre-amendment 8 code which incorporated state law by reference, or 9 following the amendments under BAPCPA.

10 He didn't delve into the intellectual 11 issue, your Honor, which is that now that there appears to 12 be a Federal reclamation right separate and apart from the 13 UCC, that I think it's up to the court now to develop 14 Federal common law, to interpret that provision and to 15 apply it.

16 Under the pre-amendment statute, 546 said
17 that the rights under state law were preserved. So courts 18 interpreting 546(c) pre-amendment naturally looked to the 19 UCC and applied the traditional concepts, including the 20 valueless defense. But now we are in a new regime, where 21 now we have arguably a Federal reclamation right.

22 The claimants would argue that the 23 establishment of a Federal reclamation right wipes the 24 slight clean, that your Honor should disregard years of 25 juris prudence around the country about the interaction

1 between reclamation claimants and secured claimants, but we 2 don't think that that's appropriate, nor do we think that 3 there's anything on the statute or the legislative history 4 that would warrant such a departure. As we've cited in our 5 brief, a number of Supreme Court cases, including Ducna
6 versus Tim, hold that when Congress amends a code like the 7 Bankruptcy Code, that absent some indication by Congress of 8 an intention to do away with preexisting precedent under 9 the prior tradition, that there's no reason to engage in 10 some vast departure from years of jurisprudence. And here 11 not only do you have no legislative history to that effect, 12 you have language in the statute, the reference to subject 13 to the prior rights of a holder of security interest that 14 has every indication Congress intended to codify Dairy 15 Mart.

16 So the arguments that we should now make 17 law out of whole cloth and interpret this in a way that 18 favors them simply finds no basis in the statute, it finds 19 no basis in the legislative history.

20 We come back to the Dairy Mart facts. This 21 is a case essentially on all fours with Dairy Mart. The 22 only case the claimants can point to that reaches a 23 different result is the Phar-Mor case by Judge Boah.

24 As we've indicated in our papers, Judge 25 Boah in Phar-Mor took a very formalistic approach to an

1 economic transaction, which is a DIP loan that refinances a 2 prepetition loan. What Judge Boah found in that case was 3 that by virtue of the fact that the prepetition lender had 4 released its security interest and the debtor granted a new 5 security interest in the very same goods to the DIP lender, 6 that somehow the reclamation claimant stepped up because in 7 a nano second those goods are were released from the 8 prepetition lien.

9 As we've argued in our papers, that 10 elevates form over substance. As Judge Gonzalez found in 11 Dairy Mart, this is an integrated transaction; the 12 satisfaction of the prepetition lien through the use of new 13 DIP loan proceeds, secured by the very same collateral, is 14 in effect a transfer of the security interest, and it's a 15 unified transaction where those goods were never free and 16 clear, they were never not the subject of a security 17 interest.

18 So under pre BAPCPA law, as well as under 19 546(c), the reclamation claimants were behind the holder of 20 a security interests. And as I said, it elevates form over 21 substance, whether the old lien is transferred, whether the 22 goods are sold to a third party and the proceeds are used 23 to satisfy the prepetition lien, economically it's all the 24 same issue, and there's no reclamation claimants to hurdle 25 over that secured lien through some novel interpretation of

1 the new statutory language. The basis is just not there in 2 the language of the statute or in the legislative history.

3 So efforts to craft new law really run against years of 4 juris prudence and run against the language of the statute.

5 The other responses that claimants have put 6 forward, aside from you know pointing to Phar-Mor and 7 pointing to the new statute, include this notion that there 8 should be equitable martialling. And again this is 9 manufactured out of whole cloth. The claimants can't 10 escape the fact that where you have individual reclamation 11 claims for dollar amounts that are less than the 12 prepetition secured debt, even though the secured creditor
13 may be over collateralized, they cannot force a secured 14 creditors to satisfy that claim out of collateral and goods 15 other than their reclaimed goods. In effect what they are 16 trying to do is shift the burden over to other reclamation 17 claimants, that their goods be used to satisfy the secured 18 lender, and that the excess collateral be treated as their 19 goods so they can reclaim. It's simply trying to prejudice 20 other reclamation claimants at the expense of themselves, 21 but there's no basis in law for a reclamation claimants 22 which is not a lien holder, to force a secured creditor to 23 resort to one particular piece of collateral as opposed to 24 others.

25 A related theme in the papers is that

A0883

1 somehow this is an unfairness being cast upon the 2 reclamation claimants that benefits Dana, that this is a 3 debtor reclamation dispute. That's just not the case.
4 This is about equality of distribution among creditors.

5 When reclamation claimants try to step up
6 and get themselves an administrative expense or some other 7 form of beneficial treatment, they do so at the expense of 8 other unsecured creditors.

9 THE COURT: Well, 503(b)(9) gives them that 10 administrative expense.

11 MR. FEINSTEIN: That's exactly right, your 12 Honor.

13 THE COURT: Notwithstanding the issue
14 before me today.

15 MR. FEINSTEIN: That's right. And if 16 there's any perceived unfairness in the valueless defense
17 or the treatment of reclamation creditors generally 18 relevant to secured lenders, Congress ameliorated that by 19 granting under an different amendment in the Code, this 20 right to receive an administrative expense for the goods 21 delivered within 20 days of a bankruptcy, whether or not 22 the creditors satisfied the reclamation requirements,
23 whether or not they made a demand, it's simply, if you ship 24 goods within 20 days you do not get paid.

25 As we've argued in our papers, that benefit

VERITEXT/NEW YORK REPORTING COMPANY

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

A0884

1 to the suppliers is something that Congress wanted to 2 grant, but it certainly was not any evidence of legislative 3 intent to change the valueless defense to overrule Dairy 4 Mart, because 546(c) does contain the reference to the 5 prior liens.

6 So Congress -- there's not much legislative 7 history of BAPCPA so we can only infer that Congress saw a 8 problem and addressed it by adjusting the equities and 9 relevant rights, not by changing the reclamation statute 10 but by giving the suppliers this 20 day administrative 11 claim.

12 THE COURT: In all these claims has there 13 been an analyses as to the bottom line difference between 14 the absolute prior lien defense, and notwithstanding that, 15 the 503(b)(9) 20 day award?

16 MR. FEINSTEIN: I don't think so, your 17 Honor. Basically what you are saying is have we broken 18 down the reclamation demands between the 20 days prior to 19 the bankruptcy and the day 21 through 45, I don't believe 20 so.

21 MR. SULLIVAN: Your Honor, I believe I've 22 cited in footnote 5 of the brief of Timken Toyotetsu. I've 23 had previous communications with debtor's counsel, and I 24 spelled out what was represented, to me anyway, as being 25 the difference. It was told to me, at least as of that

1 point in time, that approximately 60 million dollars of the 2 reclamation claims were entitled to administrative priority
3 under Section 503(b)(9).

4 THE COURT: 503(b)(9).

5 MR. SULLIVAN: That's right. And as of 6 that point in time there was only 110 dollars worth of 7 reclamation claims remaining. So we are really only 8 talking about a difference of I guess about 50 million 9 dollars.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. FEINSTEIN: Your Honor, while it's not 12 on file with the court, I'm advised that Dana has done some 13 investigation of this, but I don't have a breakdown for the 14 court, your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Well, it's an ad hominem
16 factoid that says that the difference is some 50 million 17 dollars at a certain point in time; is that correct?

18 MR. SULLIVAN: That's what was represented
19 to me. Whether or not that's true, I don't know.

20 THE COURT: That wouldn't give effect to 21 whatever settlements have occurred in the interim.

22 MR. SULLIVAN: Exactly right, your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. FEINSTEIN: Let me move on, your Honor.
25 Another argument that some of the 1 reclamation claimants make goes to the issue of good faith.

2 Under the predecessor provision of 546(c),
3 reference is made to 2702 of the UCC which provided that a 4 buyer of the goods who acted in good faith would take 5 precedence over reclamation claimant. And as the laws have 6 developed, and under the UCC as well, indicated that a 7 subsequent lender like our DIP lender in this case and like 8 the prior lien holder, would qualify as a good faith 9 purchaser.

10 Interestingly, under the new provision
11 under 546(c), the so called Federal reclamation right, 12 there's no longer a reference to good faith. And as we've 13 indicated in our brief, it's most likely, although we are 14 speculating, and we ask this of legislative history, but 15 it's most likely because routinely lenders are treated as 16 good faith purchasers.

17 But it's something of a red herring now
18 for, particularly in light of the new statutory language, 19 for reclamation claimants to argue that the DIP lender
20 didn't act in good faith, that there needs to be discovery 21 on this issue or that it's even a legal issue at all. It's 22 really not relevant now under the new statutory provision.

23 Another argument that is made incredibly in 24 some of the opposition papers is that somehow that your 25 Honor's DIP loan approval order affected their reclamation

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

A00887

A0887

1 rights or -- some of them argued that it actually 2 established the primacy of reclamation claimant's rights
3 over the DIP lender's rights, which is simply absurd.

4 And the claimants point to paragraph 30 of 5 the DIP order, the final DIP order is entitled setoff
6 rights of third parties. But those claimants who made this 7 argument only selectively quoted it, they left out some 8 fairly important words. Nowhere in this paragraph is there 9 any reference to reclamation. The paragraph that they are 10 pointing to indicates that nothing in the DIP loan order 11 will effect if the validity, enforceability or priority of 12 any setoff recoupment or other claim right or defense of 13 any customer or supplier of any debtor in respect of any 14 account receivable, payment intangible or other payment 15 obligation of that customer.

16 Now the reclamation claimants who have 17 pointed to this paragraph have left out the language "or 18 any other payment obligation" and have tried to engraft 19 their own interpretation onto this paragraph to say that 20 this paragraph was not intended to effect their reclamation
21 right, that their reclamation rights survived the DIP
22 order, take primacy over the super priority lien of the DIP 23 lender, and they get there, as I said, by managing the 24 provision and really misquoting it.

25 But this paragraph 30 of the DIP order does

1 not address reclamation rights, and certainly does not, as 2 they continued, give their reclamation demand priority over 3 a DIP lender who was granted a super priority lien and 4 super priority administrative expense by your Honor by 5 Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code. So that argument as 6 well is unavailing.

7 Your Honor, I think I have catalogued and 8 addressed the principal arguments by the claimant's. I
9 refer your Honor again to our lengthy briefs on the issues, 10 and will certainly answer any questions that your Honor has 11 about the issues.

12 Thank you.

13 MR. SULLIVAN: Your Honor, James Sullivan
14 of McDermott Will and Emery on behalf of the Timken and 15 Toyotetsu reclamation creditors.

16 Your Honor, as the debtors' have would have 17 it, and I'll just kind of outline what I perceive to be at 18 the trust of the debtors' arguments. First, they want you 19 to ignore what actually happened in favor of what they wish 20 happened.

21 Second, they want you to recognize a deemed 22 or effective disposition of the reclaimed goods as opposed 23 to an actual one; they want you to -- they basically want 24 you to permit them, as opposed to the prepetition lender, 25 to decide after the fact how their assets should have been

1 martialled as part of the deemed disposition to satisfy the 2 prepetition debt in a way that wipes out all reclamation 3 claims.

4 So contrary to what the debtors are saying,
5 we are not the ones seeking to marshal the assets. The 6 disposition has already occurred --

7 THE COURT: They are not wiping out all 8 reclamation claims, they remain liable under 503(b)(9) for 9 the 20 day reclamation claims notwithstanding any argument 10 here.

11 MR. SULLIVAN: Well that's a separate
12 issue, your Honor. When I'm talking about the reclamation 13 claims I'm not talking about the 503(b)(9) which no one 14 disputes survives. What I'm talking about is the I guess 15 really we are talking about the reclamation demand with 16 respect to goods that were shipped between 20 and 45 days 17 prior to the bankruptcy filing.

18 But what the debtors are arguing is that 19 somehow the reclamation creditors are trying to seek some 20 kind of martialling. That's not what's happening here.
21 What's happening here is the debtors are seeking to stand 22 in the shoes of the secured creditor and make an argument 23 after the fact as to what they wish had happened.

24 What happened is that the prepetition
25 lenders were not repaid from proceeds of the refund goods,

1 but from the proceeds of the DIP loan. What they want you 2 to say is look even though we didn't pay off the 3 prepetition debt with the inventory that is the subject of 4 the reclamation claims; we wish it had and we want you to 5 find that it effectively did, even though it didn't 6 actually. So that's what's really happening. It's not 7 like the reclamation creditors are coming into court and 8 asking you to marshal.

9 Normally when you are talking about 10 martialling you are talking about a dispute between two 11 creditors. There's no other creditor at the other side of 12 the table, your Honor; I'm not arguing with another 13 creditor. I'm arguing with the debtor. And you shouldn't 14 give the debtor standing to, in essence, step into the 15 shoes of the prepetition secured creditor, who is not here
16 asking you to do anything, your Honor.

17 All we are doing is we're coming in here
18 and saying look the debtors' argument that somehow you 19 should ignore the facts, ignore what actually happened, and 20 allow them to avoid having to make good on the reclamation 21 goods, it's just an absurd position, and there's no basis 22 for it. They have no standing to even assert this 23 martialling argument, and it would just be inequitable.

24 Just to point out a few reasons why their 25 argument is absurd.

1 THE COURT: Getting back again to my prior 2 inquiry. Essentially the goods at issue are those that 3 were shipped more than 20 days, between 20 and 45 days out.

4 MR. SULLIVAN: That's correct, your Honor.

5 THE COURT: It's issue does not relate at 6 all to the goods shipped in the 20 day period prior to 7 insolvency.

8 MR. SULLIVAN: I don't see it, because all
9 the reclamation creditors are going to get their 503(b)(9)
10 claim. Maybe there's a few out there.

11 THE COURT: I'm just making a practical
12 inquiry to see exactly what's at stake here.

13 MR. SULLIVAN: Yes. Certainly my clients
14 are not requesting reclamation of its goods, they are happy 15 with the 503(b)(9) claim. So to the extent that there's a 16 dispute as to that, it certainly doesn't lie with us, and I
17 doubt it would lie with any of the other reclamation
18 creditors.

19 THE COURT: You mean you get your claim
20 complete because you have no goods that were received more 21 than 20 days prior to the filing?

22 MR. SULLIVAN: Your Honor, I'm only arguing 23 about the goods that were shipped more than 20 days; that's 24 all I'm arguing about today.

25 THE COURT: Does your client fit that

1 category?

2 MR. SULLIVAN: Yes, your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Okay, that's what I'm asking.

4 MR. SULLIVAN: So --

5 THE COURT: I'm asking that only because 6 you are raising standing issues, and I wonder if everybody
7 here, or a good portion, are covered by the 20 day
8 503(b)(9), I doubt you have standing.

9 MR. SULLIVAN: I would agree with that,
10 your Honor. And I'm sure if they were covered by it, I 11 doubt that they would bother to object. So maybe that's 12 why some of the reclamation claims have dropped by the 13 wayside; I don't know.

14 But just to kind of point out some of these 15 reasons. First of all, it's undisputed, and the debtors
16 acknowledge this, that the reclaimed goods, the goods 17 falling between 20 and 45 days, neither those goods or nor 18 the proceeds of those goods were actually used to repay the 19 prepetition debt. Undisputed, your Honor. I think that in 20 and of itself that admission should do away with this whole 21 hearing.

22 Secondly, the prepetition liens were not 23 assigned to the DIP lender as part of the deemed 24 disposition, therefore, if you look at the -- and there's a 25 dichotomy in the Phar-Mor case versus the

1 Pittsburgh-Canfield case where that really made the 2 difference, because the Pittsburgh-Canfield was decided one
3 way, the Phar-Mor case was decided the exact opposite way, 4 predominantly, if not solely, as a result of the fact that 5 the -- there was no stepping into the shoes of the 6 prepetition lien holders lien. So the DIP lender didn't 7 take over the liens of the prepetition lien holder, and the 8 Phar-Mor court found that fact to be dispositive.

9 And it also cuts against the debtors'
10 argument here, because not only was there no assignment of 11 the prepetition lien, which was in essence released as part 12 of the transaction, but there really was no integrated 13 transaction as it occurred in the Dairy Mart case.

14 This case is distinguished from Dairy Mart.
15 Unlike what the debtors are trying to tell you, it doesn't 16 lie on all four with the Phar-Mor case, and there's a few 17 notable distinctions.

18 THE COURT: You mean with the Dairy Mart
19 case.

20 MR. SULLIVAN: I'm sorry, the Dairy Mart
21 case; that's correct, your Honor.

22 First of all the collateral package was not 23 identical. The Dairy Mart case made a lot of the fact that 24 the collateral package between by both the prepetition 25 lender and the postpetition lender was identical. And in

1 both situations both lenders had liens on basically, if not 2 all, substantially all of the debtors' assets, but it was 3 in essence an exact match in terms of what the collateral 4 package is. That's not the case here, your Honor. There's 5 a number of differences between the collateral package 6 between the prepetition lender and the postpetition lender.

7 In addition, in the Dairy Mart case the DIP
8 lien was made subject to the liens of the prepetition lien
9 holder, and therefore it wouldn't make sense for the DIP 10 lender to agree to lend on that basis unless the 11 prepetition lender was definitely going to get repaid as 12 part of the DIP loan.

13 In this case, your Honor, the prepetition 14 liens were made subject to the DIP liens. So as far as the 15 DIP lender is concerned they could care less whether or not 16 the prepetition liens get repaid and so therefore they are 17 not going to condition a repayment of their prepetition
18 lien as a condition of making the loan, because their liens 19 prime the prepetition lenders. So, again, this isn't the 20 type of integrated transaction that you had in Dairy Mart.
21 So on those two grounds you have a very, very different 22 fact pattern.

23 Also, I think even if for some reason the 24 court were to find the Dairy Mart case as having some kind 25 of validity, and I would mention to the court that

1 notwithstanding what the debtors are telling you, it's not 2 like there's a long history of cases that agree with the 3 Dairy Mart decision in which Congress somehow, you know, by 4 not specifically mentioning some kind of overruling of 5 Dairy Mart impliedly are telling you that you should follow
6 Dairy Mart. In fact the opposite is true, your Honor.

7 I would represent that Dairy Mart is 8 basically a case that's kind of alone in the woods 9 somewhat. All the other cases that are cited in the 10 various briefs, even by the debtors, really don't reach a 11 conclusion anywhere near what the Dairy Mart case. And all 12 of those cases basically acknowledge the truth, which the 13 debtors cited in the reclamation procedures motion when 14 they filed it.

15 What they said was, look, it's a wait and 16 see kind of approach that you have to take when you are 17 dealing with reclamation claims. If the reclaimed goods 18 are sold to satisfy the prepetition debt, sorry reclaim 19 creditors, your claim has no value. But if the reclaimed 20 good is not sold to pay down the prepetition debt, all of a 21 sudden it has value.

22 And they cited in their reclamation brief
23 the following quotations from Arlco and Pester, in which 24 they said, after the secured creditors superior rights have 25 been satisfied or released, which is exactly what happened

1 here, your Honor, the reclaiming seller retains a property
2 interest in any remaining goods and in any surplus proceeds 3 from the secured creditor's foreclosure sale.

4 So contrary to what the debtors are telling 5 you, they didn't put anyone on notice that this is what 6 they were intending to do. For example, and part of the 7 what the argument is that this is just like what happened
8 in Pittsburgh-Canfield. The language in the reclamation 9 procedures motion here is nothing like the language in the 10 Pittsburgh-Canfield case.

11 In the Pittsburgh-Canfield case they 12 specifically said that the debtor would be asserting that 13 the bank lenders' liens trumps the reclamation creditors.
14 That's not what happened here, your Honor. Basically when 15 you take a look at the language in the reclamation order 16 which basically suggested to creditors, look, if it happens 17 that we don't repay the prepetition debt with the proceeds 18 of the reclaimed goods, you are going to have value here.
19 And that's what the cases that they quote in their 20 reclamation procedures motion say.

21 When you couple that with a DIP motion
22 which says that we are going to do is we are going to pay
23 down the prepetition debt with the proceeds of the DIP 24 loan, you have a bunch of reclamation creditors out in the 25 audience saying whoopee, our reclamation claims are going

1 to have to some value here. We're not going to object to 2 any of this stuff because at the end of the day the 3 reclamation claims are going to have value.

4 So for the debtors to sit here and to 5 suggest that their papers put reclamation creditors on 6 notice that they were going to seek to wipe out all of 7 their reclamation claims on the basis of this prior lien
8 defense and the Dairy Mart case is absurd. They didn't 9 even cite the Dairy Mart case in their papers. They never 10 indicated that they were going to bring such a motion, and 11 the statements in their motions gave the reclamation 12 creditors the exact opposite impression, that they were 13 going to pay down the prepetition debt with the proceeds of 14 the DIP loan, not use the proceeds of any reclaimed goods, 15 and that if that happened that the reclaimed goods would 16 have value.

17 So I find, or at least in my argument is 18 that the debtors should be equitable estopped from raising 19 the prior lien defense at this time because their actions
20 caused the reclamation creditors to sit by and, you know, 21 to sit on their rights when absent such conduct on their 22 part the results may have been very different.

23 And, your Honor, I'm not sure if I quoted 24 in my papers, but the facts of this case in that regard are 25 somewhat similar to what happened in the Flemming case,

VERITEXT/NEW YORK REPORTING COMPANY

212-267-6868

A0898

1 where the Flemming debtors pulled the same kind of stuff,
2 and Judge Wohlrath basically laid into the debtor's counsel
3 for doing that same kind of stuff. She issued an opinion
4 that basically chastised the debtor's counsel for doing 5 this exact same thing and ended up making deductions in 6 terms of their attorneys fees as a result of it.

7 So, you know, for them to suggest that they 8 put reclamation creditors on notice, your Honor, I just 9 don't think that that's the case.

10 Your Honor, aside and apart from the 11 reasons that I set out, I think that if the court were to 12 acknowledge the prior lien defense as set forth by the 13 debtors, it would really create a grossly inequitable 14 result and would provide perverse incentives for both 15 debtors and creditors in future cases.

16 In terms of future incentives, what it
17 would do is it would incentivise debtors from lienning up 18 some of their inventory prior to a bankruptcy filing, 19 shortly before a bankruptcy filing; not to suggest that 20 debtors would necessarily do it, but it certainly 21 highlights the problem here.

22 And I pointed it out in a hypothetical on 23 page 17 of my initial brief that hypothetically speaking a 24 debtor could, let's say a hundred days prior to the 25 bankruptcy filing, kind of like what happened here, a

1 hundred days prior to the bankruptcy filing the debtors
2 liened up their assets. And, you know, just pick a number 3 out of a hat, they could get a lien of a million bucks, not 4 a lot considering maybe you have hundreds of millions of 5 dollars of inventory, maybe billions of dollars worth of 6 assets as the debtors have here, and let's say there's 7 reclamation claims, potential reclamation claims of a few 8 hundred million bucks. By refinancing that as part of a 9 DIP loan --

10 THE COURT: In your scenario there would 11 never even be a bankruptcy. This is a good solid debtor.

12 MR. SULLIVAN: Well, the facts aren't all 13 that different here, your Honor. And in fact we do have a 14 bankruptcy. You have a debtor a hundred days prior to the 15 bankruptcy filing, they have no secured debt. They lien it 16 up with about 400 million dollars worth of debt.

17 THE COURT: You don't profile Dana with 18 your example.

19 MR. SULLIVAN: Excuse me, your Honor?

20 THE COURT: You don't profile Dana with
21 your example.

22 MR. SULLIVAN: Not exactly. But I was just 23 trying to show the absurdity of their petition by taking it 24 a little bit to an extreme. But I can use this as the 25 example of the Dana case, and I think it's almost equally

1 as absurd, where you have over 2 billion dollars worth of 2 collateral in connection with a 400 million dollar loan and 3 you have, by choosing to use solely the reclaimed
4 inventory, or just about, to pay down that debt through a 5 refinancing, it's grossly inequitable when you have 6 approximately 1.8 billion dollars worth of other goods that 7 are available to repay the debt.

8 Why choose or why allocate it or marshal 9 it, like the debtors are asking you to do, in a way that 10 defeats the rights of reclamation creditors as opposed to, 11 you know, some other way, you know, either choosing to do 12 it from the non --

13 THE COURT: Because lenders are greedy.
14 They want to get liens on everything in sight.

15 MR. SULLIVAN: And we have no problem with 16 the lenders. They are not on the other side of the table,
17 your Honor.

18 THE COURT: You have no problem with greedy
19 lenders?

20 MR. SULLIVAN: Well, we do, but in this 21 case we have no dispute with them because they are not on 22 the other side of the table, your Honor. It's the debtor
23 that's trying to stand in the shoes of the secured
24 creditors.

25 The secured creditor here is indifference,

1 they've already been repaid. They are happy to get repaid
2 from the proceeds of a DIP loan or from goods that aren't 3 reclaimed goods or other assets as opposed to reclaimed
4 goods. They don't care.

5 But for some reason, the debtors took it 6 upon themselves to try to ask you to go back in time and to 7 kind of change things around in a way that they wish it 8 happened. They wish they had gotten assignment of their 9 liens. They wish they had paid off maybe the reclaimed 10 goods with the proceeds of -- I'm sorry, repay the 11 prepetition debt with the proceeds of reclaimed goods, but 12 they didn't, and they acknowledge all of this. So for them 13 to try to rewrite history, your Honor, and use that 14 rewritten history to wipe out all the reclamation claims is 15 just absurd, your Honor.

16 I'm going to respond to a couple of points
17 that were raised by the debtor that I didn't get to so far.
18 The debtors posit that what the Phar-Mor case does is posit 19 form over substance. Your Honor, what I suggest is that 20 what the debtors are doing is they are positing fantasies 21 over reality. They are asking you to pretend that the 22 facts of this case are other than what they are.

23 The facts of this case are the proceeds of 24 the reclaimed goods were not used to pay down the 25 prepetition debt. They want you to pretend that it was.

1 It just doesn't make any sense to do that.

2 As far as the good faith issue, your Honor,
3 and, you know, to some extent you don't need to address
4 this if you end of up ruling in your favor. But in terms 5 of good faith, they suggested that the case law is 6 universal or uniform in the holding that all secured
7 creditors are good faith lenders. There's just no case law
8 that says that, your Honor. In fact, the abundance of case 9 law which we cited in our brief suggests the opposite.
10 Maybe in some cases, such as the Dairy Mart case, good 11 faith was not in dispute. But there's no basis for the 12 debtors to suggest that all good faith -- I'm sorry, all 13 lenders are good faith lenders. And I don't think your 14 Honor would agree with that either.

15 In terms of paragraph 30 of the DIP order, 16 your Honor. I can at least represent -- I don't know what 17 other creditors did, but I can at least represent to you 18 that we did refer to the entire language of paragraph 30.
19 And I don't believe that paragraph 30 does what the debtors
20 say it does. If it does then, it was certainly poorly 21 drafted. And to the extent there's any ambiguity in the 22 paragraph 30, it should not be held against the reclamation 23 creditors, but the debtors and/or the DIP lenders.

24 But in any case I don't think you really 25 need to reach the issue about what paragraph 30 says or

1 what it doesn't say, because I don't believe it's 2 dispositive in terms of deciding this motion.

3 The debtors never asked you to value the 4 reclamation claims as zero based upon the existence of the 5 did DIP loans, so you really don't need to address it in 6 that sense. You know, if they had made that argument, 7 reclamation creditors or if paragraph 30 truly did trump 8 the reclamation claims, the reclamation claim holders would 9 have probably sought adequate protection. And to the 10 extent the court finds paragraph 30 makes the DIP liens 11 come ahead of the reclamation claims, then we would 12 respectfully request adequate protection of our reclamation 13 rights.

14 And the final policy argument, your Honor, 15 in terms of perverse incentives is that basically if the 16 court decides to rule in favor of the debtors on this 17 issue, what it's going to do is it's going to create 18 perverse incentives for reclamation claim holders in the 19 beginning of the case to seek formation of a committee to 20 object to a good number of the significant first day
21 motions in the case such as DIP motions, cash collateral 22 motions, reclamation procedures motions, as well as any 23 potential sale motions involving, you know, I guess whether 24 it be sales involving reclaimed goods or not; any kind of 25 motion that's going to --

1 THE COURT: That's a policy issue that 2 deals with proliferation of committees. Both the U.S.
3 Trustee and the court are gate keepers in that regard, so 4 that kind of horrible is not necessarily one that this 5 court recognizes as really legitimate.

6 MR. SULLIVAN: Well, whether it be official 7 or committees or unofficial --

8 THE COURT: In fact, you are even making 9 the suggestion that those kinds of committees probably are 10 illegitimate and shouldn't be formulated and given a voice 11 in the Tower of Babble.

12 I think the courts are pretty well able to 13 distinguish the makeup of a Tower of Babble. And 14 notwithstanding the entry with the academy awards of a 15 picture of that name, too many of the cases before this 16 court are Towers of Babble, and I don't see that that's a 17 real danger that we have to worry about.

18 MR. SULLIVAN: Well, all I'm suggesting,
19 your Honor, is there's --

20 THE COURT: There is always a motive for 21 people to get together to have a voice, and motivation in 22 that regard comes from a whole host of areas.

23 MR. SULLIVAN: But what I'm suggesting,
24 even more so than the committee part of it, that it's going 25 to proliferate a bunch of litigation in the beginning of

1 the case when really what you want is creditors to try to 2 work in tandem with the debtors and try to move towards a
3 consensual case. And what this is going to cause is a 4 bunch of litigation in the beginning of a case to deal with 5 a lot of these kinds of issue. And I just think it's 6 probably not in the best interest of the debtors in an 7 overwhelming majority of cases to require creditors to do 8 that.

9 THE COURT: I think, on the other hand, the 10 debtor probably wants to make the same argument to get a 11 legal principal in place that will end the uncertainty and 12 you won't have a lot of litigation whether either side 13 prevails. I think that's a fair statement.

14 MR. SULLIVAN: Let me take it to a little 15 bit of a -- to give you an example to kind of highlight my 16 point.

17 In cases such as this, what you have is a 18 debtor. They are thinking, how do I create value in a 19 case?

20 THE COURT: If the lien theory holds, and 21 it is a total block, then there's no need for litigation.
22 It won't happen. That if this is either a Phar-Mor or a 23 Dairy Mart jurisdiction, everybody will know. Isn't that 24 what's at stake here right now?

25 MR. SULLIVAN: I suppose if you were to

1 decide that, well, it's certainly not -- until the Second
2 Circuit of the Supreme Court rules on this issue, my guess
3 is it's not going to end the litigation. But what you end 4 up having is you are creating an incentive for the debtors 5 to refinance debt to wipe out all reclamation claims as 6 opposed to just liquidating the collateral in which case 7 maybe some reclamation lose value, but maybe some survive.

8 But it creates a perverse incentive that 9 somehow you can, by refinancing to 2 billion dollars worth 10 of collateral, you wipe out all reclamation claims. It 11 just doesn't make any sense. It's grossly inequitable.

12 THE COURT: Over the years I've heard this 13 form of argument many times, especially in retail chain 14 cases, where right after Christmas there is a filing after 15 they're bulked up with consumer sales and they are now 16 loaded and they have tremendous obligations they file. Is 17 that fair? There's a whole part of the community that 18 thinks it's not fair.

19 MR. SULLIVAN: It's probably what lead to a 20 revision of the Bankruptcy Code recently, your Honor.

21 THE COURT: I'm not sure that that's what 22 lead to a revision.

23 MR. SULLIVAN: Maybe not solely, but --

24 THE COURT: What really lead to a revision
25 was a consumer oriented issue, which is really not a

1 Chapter 11 or reorganization issue at all.

2 MR. SULLIVAN: But the reclamation issue
3 really has nothing to do with consumer cases. I mean the 4 reclamation -- I would posit that it's hard to tell exactly
5 what Congress did because they didn't really tell us, 6 but --

7 THE COURT: I agree. I think we all agree.

8 MR. SULLIVAN: So... all right, I think 9 that covers most of the major points that I wanted to 10 cover, your Honor.

11 THE COURT: Thank you.

12 MS. COPLEY: Good morning, your Honor.
13 Dawn Copley for Akebono Corporation and FANUC Robotics
14 Systems.

15 Your Honor, I'm going to be rely brief, I
16 just want to make a few points. Debtor's counsel kept 17 reiterating that Dairy Mart is on all fours with this case.
18 Well, Phar-Mor is as much on all fours of this case as 19 Dairy Mart if not more so, particularly because there are a 20 couple of issues, and I think counsel also raised, my 21 fellow reclamation claimant, that it in this case it's 22 exactly as it was in Phar-Mor where the prepetition lender 23 has released its liens, and then the postpetition lender, 24 the DIP lender, was granted new liens. It's exactly the 25 way that it was in Phar-Mor, and the court in Phar-Mor

1 actually acknowledged that.

2 Dairy Mart does not speak to whether or not 3 the prepetition secured lender was over secured but 4 Phar-Mor does, and it says that the prepetition secured
5 lender was over secured as this prepetition secured lender 6 was over secured in this case. So there are some 7 similarities between Phar-Mor and this case that don't 8 exist between this case and Dairy Mart.

9 And when Congress also, we just 10 acknowledged we don't know what Congress was thinking 11 because there is no legislative history for the revisions 12 to the reclamation statute.

13 THE COURT: That posits a theory that we 14 don't know what we are thinking when we elect people into 15 Congress.

16 MS. COPLEY: But there's no more indication 17 that Congress was codifying Dairy Mart any more than it was 18 codifying Phar-Mor, all the statute says is that the 19 reclamation claims are subject to the prior lien of its 20 prepetition secured creditor. I don't think any of the -- 21 at least from my reading of the briefing, that any of the 22 reclamation claimants have said that it's not subject to.
23 We've not said that, so we don't know what Congress was 24 thinking as far as whether it was codifying anything.
25 Perhaps it was codifying all of the case law that at least

61

1 acknowledge that prior lien, but not going to the extent of 2 saying but they are all valued at zero, as the debtor would 3 suggest that is what Congress intended. I think if 4 Congress intended loan would be valued at zero, it would 5 have said that in the statute. It would have said they are 6 all valued at zero.

7 THE COURT: Yes, but it might have had 8 another thought in mind whether it gave an award under 9 503(b) (9) .

10 MS. COPLEY: Well, that could very well be 11 as well, your Honor, and I guess that's for the court to 12 decide, which reasoning is more bound to this court. But 13 there are cases that aren't just the Phar-Mor and the Dairy 14 Mart case. While those are the ones that I think the 15 parties here have probably raised most often, there is also 16 Pester Refinancing where the court held, and in that case 17 the prepetition lender was also the postpetition lender, 18 and it was paid through the plan of reorganization not 19 using the collateral that represented the reclaimed goods, 20 and the court in that case said when a prepetition lender 21 is paid from any other source, any other source than the 22 proceeds of the reclaimed goods, then the reclaimed goods 23 have value. The reclaimer's claims have value.

24 So I think that we can't ignore that case 25 as well because there is, in this case, payment from

A0910

1 another source.

2 As I said, your Honor, I represent two 3 claimants, Akebono and FANUC, and I just want to raise one 4 issue for FANUC. FANUC did not provide inventory to 5 debtor, FANUC produced robotic systems, it's equipment the 6 debtor uses, and the debtor is using that equipment now.
7 That is equipment has not been disposed of to pay the 8 prepetition lenders, not even withstanding that the debtors
9 have already acknowledged that none of the reclaimer's 10 goods were used to pay the prepetition lenders. Certainly 11 this equipment is not being used to pay either prepetition 12 lenders or the postpetition lenders, it's being used by the 13 debtor to manufacture its goods.

14 So I think FANUC in particular, their claim 15 should survive any claim of the prepetition lender.

16 Thank you, your Honor.

17 MR. GELDERT: Your Honor, Brian Geldert of 18 Akin Gump Strauss Hauer and Feld on behalf of Hain Capital 19 Group.

20 I think there's been a lot of focus on 21 503(b)(9) here, and what we lose are the claims that are 22 asserted arising from the 21st day to the 45th day. And 23 what I think all the parties agree on is that Congress did 24 enhance the right of reclamation claimants when they 25 amended the Bankruptcy Code. They provided them

VERITEXT/NEW YORK REPORTING COMPANY

212-267-6868

516-608-2400

A00911

A0911

1 administrative claims for the goods delivered within the 2 first 20 days, but they also extended the reclamation
3 period for reclamation claimants.

4 What we have here is reclamation claims
5 that are subject to the rights of the prepetition secured 6 lien holder. This lien holder is over secured and it was 7 paid off from the proceeds of the DIP. So taking Dairy
8 Mart and applying it to a case like this, in our view, 9 effectively in every case where there's a debtor in 10 possession financing, would wipe it reclamation claims 11 asserted based on the 21st day to the 45th day, and that 12 cannot be what Congress intended to be the result by 13 enlarging the reclamation creditor's rights. And I think 14 that was, I just wanted to add that.

15 MR. RENDA: Your Honor, Thomas Renda on 16 behalf of Emhart Technologies and Hydro Aluminum. We had 17 filed a pro hac motion last week. Your Honor, Emhart and 18 Hydro both supplied credit on the basis of 60 day terms 19 right until the very eve of the bankruptcy, and so I think 20 that my clients in fact do have standing to raise the issue 21 concerning the gap between those 20 day provisions of 22 Section 503(b) and the enhanced reclamation rights that go 23 to 45 days.

24 I'm not going to repeat points that have 25 been previously made, your Honor, I'm just going to point

1 our a couple of things that haven't been mentioned so far,
2 at least expressly.

3 There's been a statement that the Phar-Mor
4 case is a mechanistic approach. I think frankly Phar-Mor
5 and Dairy Mart are somewhat mechanistic at how they arrived
6 at their result, but before the 2005 amendments have said
7 that there was no real reason to suggest that one was more 8 valid than the other or less persuasive than the other.

9 I do think that the language in Section
10 546(c) now, which refers to prior rights of secured 11 lenders, is a little bit more restrictive than what the 12 debtor would have you find here, because they are really 13 not holding up prior rights of secured lenders in this 14 case, they are really holding up new rights of the 15 postpetition lenders as a way of defeating rights to 16 reclamation claims.

17 THE COURT: Doesn't Dairy Mart say this is 18 one integrated transaction?

19 MR. RENDA: Dairy Mart does say that, your 20 Honor. And again, were it not for the fact that the 21 statute changed, and were it not for the fact that the 22 Congress has directed us to look for to prior rights of 23 secured lenders, I would say the court would be probably 24 advised to follow Dairy Mart, but I think you could read 25 Section 546(c) to restrict that, and say that, as we

1 understand, a prepetition lender has rights that are 2 superior to but do not eliminate or trump, I think was the 3 word that the debtors' counsel used, do not eliminate or 4 trump the reclamation claims, they simply come first.

5 And now it's being argued, after Congress
6 enacted Section 546(c) and it said pay attention to the 7 prior lender's rights, but now a new lender can essentially 8 have greater rights. And I think that's a result that 9 would be a little surprising to Congress when they enacted 10 this legislation.

11 Your Honor, with respect to the issue of 12 the DIP order in section paragraph 30 of the DIP order, the 13 debtor has pointed out that the language in that section of 14 the order makes a reference to payment claims. I note, 15 your Honor, that they had to highlight that, in explaining 16 what the section meant had to highlight it. And it seems 17 to me that it is ambiguous, that that language, especially 18 coupled with a reclamation motion which referred to 19 reclamation rights, as we commonly understand it, which is 20 that the secured lender's are superior, but that the 21 reclamation rights come behind the secured lender, that 22 those two, in concert, do give the court grounds to hold 23 that there should be some sort of estoppel from now
24 asserting that the DIP order somehow had even great rights 25 than the prepetition lenders.

1 Certainly that wasn't noticed out to 2 creditors and reclamation claimants, they weren't served 3 with notice; they weren't serve with a notice that their 4 reclamation claims would be eliminated by the entry of a 5 DIP order. We don't know whether the DIP lender would have 6 agreed to allow the reclamation claims to be paid because 7 we haven't been given the chance to seek that discovery.
8 My suspension is that the DIP lender may not have been 9 sanguine about the prospect of lending against inventory 10 that was subject to reclamation claims, especially in light 11 of the changes that took place in the statute in 2005. We 12 would like to find that out.

13 And lastly, your Honor, the question of 14 martialling, it seems to be a little bit of a red herring.
15 Even when your Honor has two liens, two consensually
16 granted Article 9 liens, the bankruptcy courts don't 17 generally marshal, it's really a question of adequate 18 protection. The junior lender rights are adequately 19 protected if the senior lender sells collateral that the 20 junior lender has a lien in, and typically there would be 21 an adequate protection stipulation that is entered into.

22 In this case what you are being asked to do
23 is to presume that when a fairly large amount of collateral 24 that is more than sufficient to pay the reclamation claims 25 is pledged to a new lender, that the presumption ought to

1 be that all of the collateral necessary to pay the 2 reclamation claims is being used up to the exclusion of 3 other collateral. I just don't think, especially after the 4 enactment to the changes to the Code in 2005, if that's a 5 presumption that the court out to indulge.

6 That's all I have, your Honor.

7 THE COURT: Thank you.

8 MR. LEONARD: Robert Leonard of Torre,
9 Lentz, Gamell, Gary and Rittmaster on behalf of Berlin
10 Metals LLC. I have to give you a card.

11 We submitted a brief, your Honor, and I'm 12 going to address that. I wanted to address first the pages
13 23 to 25 of the reply brief of the debtors. They make it 14 clear that a cornerstone of their position is the assertion 15 that, and I quote, "reclamation claims are not secured 16 claims." And I quote again "suppliers asserting 17 reclamation rights are not secured creditors." I'm not 18 sure why they say that. They don't really cite much 19 authority for that. They certainly don't cite any 20 authority based on the statute to that effect. And my 21 initial reaction is why are not they not secured creditors?

22 THE COURT: Did Congress say or use the 23 word lien in the statute?

24 MR. LEONARD: No, they did not.

25 THE COURT: So you want to elevate them,

1 the debtor wants to demote them. But if you want to 2 elevate, I think you need something black and white to do 3 that.

4 MR. LEONARD: Well, they merely refer to a
5 right. They certainly refer to --

6 THE COURT: But that doesn't make them a 7 secured creditor.

8 MR. LEONARD: It may not. It may and it
9 may not, I would certainly agree with that. But it does 10 give them a --

11 THE COURT: Well, ought Congress tell us if 12 it wants to make them a secured creditor?

13 MR. LEONARD: I think it would have been 14 nice if they had done so, yes.

15 THE COURT: Well, it would have been nice 16 if Congress had done a lot of things and given a little 17 more forethought. It may well be that two different 18 partisans got into separate closets and did some drafting 19 and handed both drafts to a drafts person and said, here, 20 put this together and this is our statute.

21 MR. LEONARD: But each the debtors' briefs, 22 and both of them admit, that the reclamation right is an in 23 rem right, it is an in rem right in the property which was 24 sold to the debtors. That some kind of an interest, some 25 kind of a property interest. A property interest is
